Long stock bought at lower figures was then brought out, causing a reaction of %, with a recovery of % at the close, leaving only a net gain of %. The only other stock the transactions in which exceeded 5,060 shares was St. Paul. Fluctuations were limited to 1/4. The general market was dull and featureless. At the close the market was strong except for Chicago Gas, which became heavy on a Chicago dispatch stating that questions asked by the Attorney-general during the proceedings before him indicated that he would grant the petition for a writ of quo warranto against the trust. The trend of prices during the week have been in the main upward, the leading advances being: St. Paul & Duluth and P., C., C. & St. L. preferred, 2; C., C., C. & St. L. and Iowa Central, 24; C., C., C. & St. L. and Iowa Central preferred, 3½; Burlington & Quincy, 2½; Chicago & Alton, Consolidated Gas, Edison Electric ## changed at 406 per cent. LOCAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

A Week of Very Satisfactory Trade,

with Few Changes in Values. The week closing with Saturday, March 24, was so much of an improvement over preceding weeks of the present year that wholesale men were disposed to speak of the volume of business as being quite satisfactory and, in volume, about up to that of | $28.50. the same week in 1893. It should be borne in mind that the season is now considerably in advance of the corresponding time last year, so far as springlike weather is conberned. In prices steadiness was much the per box. characteristic. In dry goods there were no important changes. In groceries the only poultry and butter are lower than the beginning of the week on account of unprecedentedly heavy receipts. Hog products are moving quite freely, with prices still down-ward in tendency. Seed men had a busy week; prices firmer but not changed. On Commission row a good deal of business was done. Shipments of potatoes, cabbage, onions and like articles have been large. Articles of Southern production, such as cucumbers, tomatoes, strawberries and new potatoes, are so high that the demand is yet quite limited. Lower prices are looked for on strawberries next week. In other markets there was nothing calling for note. The local grain market, as the week advanced, lost its snap. The attendance on 'Change was small, and on Thursday and Saturday the bidding showed indifference and sales were meager. Track bids on Saturday ruled as follows: Wheat-No. 2 red, 53c; No. 3 red, 491/2c; Wheat—No. 2 red, 53c; No. 3 red, 49½c; rejected, 40@50c; wagon wheat, 53c.

HOOSIER EAGLES.

Tales of Aquiline Struggles and Discomfitures in a Great State. New Tork Sun.

"The Indiana eagles are on the rampage again," said George Bloshfield, of Wayne county, "and seem to have taken a particuar fancy this time to small boys. It isn't so long ago since the Sun printed the story about the big Vermillion county eagle that swooped down on a flock of geese in a farmer's door-yard, confidently expecting that it would be no job at all to soar back with a fat goose for dinner, and was almost knocked silly with surprise when the whole flock pitched into him with a vim that compelled him to do some of the liveliest fighting he had ever run up against; and even then, after licking every one of the geese, the eagle failed to get one of them for his dinner because the farmer's daughter came out and went at him with a fence rail and a dog and laid him so low that he never got any higher than the farmer's mantelpiece, and then only as a stuffed

"That story was all right, but indirectly

It gave out the idea somehow that all the eagles in Indiana were in Vermillion county Not by a long shot. Old Scott's all right when it comes to eagles. Vermillion county may have a few more eagles than Scott county, but it takes two or three Vermillion county eagles to size up with one of Scott's. Mrs. Farmer Rickards can tell you that she lived in Vermillion county when she was a girl, and once killed an eagle there that came down and tackled a turkey gobbler in her father's barnyard. She killed it with a flail with which she was threshing out oats in the barn. The eagle measured six feet and a little over from tip to tip. It was considered a fair average Vermillion county eagle. Mrs. Farmer Rickards now lives in Scott county. Some ime ago, when the weather was warm, Mrs. Rickards was out in the yard boiling scap. Her three-year-old boy was playing about the yard. Suddenly a shadow like that of a passing cloud came over the yard, and Mrs. Rickards heard a scream. She looked up and saw a heap of feathers as big as if one of her biggest feather beds had been dumped down there, but from the top of it rose the head, and from the bottom of it were thrust the feet of an eagle. The feet were clutching the clothes of Mrs. Richards's three-year-old boy, who was kicking and squirming and yelling to beat the band. Mrs. Rickards had a large ladle in her hand. She dipped it in the kattle of soap, filled it with the boiling stuff, and sprinted across the yard only too quick. The eagle had got his hooks in on the boy all right by this time, and was rising easily with the youngster. But he tarried too long. Mrs. Rickards dumped the ladle of boiling soap on the top of his head, and the hot stuff ran down and filled his eyes and nostrils jam full. The eagle dropped that boy as if he had been hotter than the soap, and began doing some of the livellest ground and lofty tumbling around that yard that was ever seen. The soap hadn't only blinded him; it was getting in its little alkall work on those sensitive organs in a way that simply crazed. "Mrs. Rickards grabbed her boy and ran with him into the house. Then she her husband's old army musket and ran back to use it on the eagle, which was still pirouetting around the yard like a rooster with its head off. The gun wouldn't go off, so Mrs. Rickards clubbed it and pounded that blinded and crazed eagle over the head until he was glad to die. He was undoubtedly a patriarch of the sky, for every feather on him was as gray as the lichen on glacial rocks, and he measured seven feet from tip to tip. These are all the returns that were in when I left home, and I expect later news of Indiana eagles when I get back; for they are on one of their periodical rampages."

He Loved Another.

Detroit Free Press. "Oh, George, you love another." Such were the words of a fair, pale girl as she clung to the arm of a tall, handsome man in the dimly lighted parlor of her father's home. He was such a man as women loved, and this fair girl loved him. They had been sweethearts for months, and the day was approaching when their plighted troth was to be redeemed. Into her heart a doubt had come, and it had found expression in the opening words of this chapter. "Darling," he said, chidingly, "how foolish you talk. You know I do not. "But you do, dear," she insisted. "I have been watching you, and I have seen it "How could you?" he contended tenderly. "There is no one in the world I love as I do vou. She gazed fondly into his handsome eyes, laid her soft, white hand caressingly on his rich brown hair, and whispered her words of admiration into his willing ears, until he was so inflated with pride that the buttons on his beautifully fitting coat began to stretch their necks. "How silly of my little girl to say her Georgie loves another," he smiled as he looked down into her sweet face. She shook her head no less doubtfully than before. "Come, now," he coaxed, "tell me who this person is I love more than I

She was silent. "Tell me," he murmured, taking her in his "Yourself, George," she sighed, hopelessly, for she was on to her Georgie, and she knew that such a love was unchangeable from the cradle to the grave. It is a difficult matter, dear reader, for a handsome man to be in love with anything else, and don't you forget it, especially if you are a woman.

NO COLD-WAVE SCARE

Report of a Decided Fall in Mercury Had Little Effect.

General Tone of the Chicago Market Tended Downward, Though Wheat Closed Practically Unchanged.

CHICAGO, March 24.- The absence of foreign news and the fact of to-day's short session being wedged in between two holidays made business on 'Change dull. Wheat opened easy and rather weak, and closed up steady, with scarcely any change from Thursday afternoon's latest quotations. Corn averaged weak, and left off with a loss of 4c. Provisions were weak, dull, and closed 10c lower for pork, unchanged for lard, and .07% lower for ribs.

Wheat started easy and dull. The weather was cold and raw in this vicinity and the temperature in the far northwest of the British provinces was down to 12 degrees below zero. There was a disinclination to believe that the cold had damaged wheat so far, although in Nebraska 24 degrees of frost was registered in the northern part of the State this morning. The Milwaukee signal service officer said: "Severe coid wave to-night and Sunday. Temperature will fall to zero in the northwestern part of Wisconsin and to 10 degrees above in the southwestern part. Low temperature probable for several days." All that did not appreciably affect the traders, who were much more impressed with the very favorable crop prospects, indicated by the Illinois State report. There were no market cablegrams, foreign markets being all closed. May wheat opened at 57%c, as compared with 57% @57% at the close on Thursday. In the course of the next twenty minutes it sold off to 571/2c, which was a return to the lowest previous price of the season, it having touched that point on Feb. 16 last. It became firmer after that, selling up to 57% bid later in the session. At the latter point Poole-Sherman sold about 300,000 bushels, supposed to be the long wheat of some customer, and that caused a reaction to 575%@57%c, but the possibility of damaging frosts before Monday morning exercised a slightly restraining influence on sellers, and it became slightly firmer again before the close. The estimarket closed up firm at 57%@57%0 for May Corn was weak with no buyers except those who had previously sold short. The receipts were 347 cars for two days, and the local crowd were inclined to sell. Bart-

1,250,000 to 1,000,000 bushels decrease. and 59%c bid for July. lett-Frazier were buyers in a conservative way. May opened at from 371/6/371/4c to 371/4c, and for a long time held between 37c and 371/4c, but toward the close of the session it dropped to 36%c. In the last few minutes the closing firmness of wheat caused some more covering of shorts and the price recovered to and closed at 371/4c. The oats market was equally dull, if not more so, than corn or wheat. The cash market was also dull and somewhat lower, due principally to the receipts of two days brought in on the market and with the usual Saturday's limited demand. At the opening May sold at 30%c. It then sold at 30%c. At the close 30%c was bid. Provisions were rather weak, but the change in prices at the close did not vary very radically from Thursday's resting prices. Pork is 10c lower and unchanged, and ribs .071/2c off. Receipts of hogs for the day amounted to 15,000 head and yesterday's receipts were 21,512. Baldwin was a seller of ribs for May at the opening, and the Anglo-American Packing Company sold Estimated receipts for Monday are:

A DUEL WITH DRINKS. Each Had a Reputation to Sustain and Each Sustained It.

Philadelphia Press. Two men sat down to a small table in a down town club a few evenings since for a purpose. It was to decide who possessed the greatest capacity for white wine. Each had the reputation, which he studiously sustained, of being able to stand more fermented juice of the grape than the other, and their criticisms of each other had become so unbearable that interested persons determined by opposing the boasters to end or mend their talk. So a grand match was

On the evening before the test a friend of the elder contestant, who was a practical joker, approached one wine drinker, and laying one hand confidingly on his shoulder, spoke thus: "Look here, old man, I speak as a friend. You've got a reputation to sustain to-morrow evening and the other fellow hasn't.

Now, as a friend, let me insist that you accept the bottles of wine I, as judge of the contest, shall prepare. They will be filled with water." A sad look of hopeless despair passed over his face. To drink water, even though he won, was inglorious; but to drink wine and, perchance, lose, that was infinitely worse This decision resulted in an argument that lasted half an hour, and the wine-drinker was then convinced. On the eventful night the two men sat down to the table, six bottles before them. The younger man was quick to the fray, the elder despaired when he tasted the pure unadulterated water. But he mastered his tastes and drank with a conquering smile. When the sixth cork was drawn each contestant stared at the other. This was wonderfully conducive to cheerful feeling, and so they promptly glared at one another. That made them rampantly joyous. Down came one ponderous fist on the table, and its owner, the elder man, roared out, "Fool how can you win. I'm drinking water.' A wan, sweet smile passed over the face of the younger man, as he faintly murmured, "So am I." An Advertising Swindle.

A lady in this city recently answered one of the advertisements which promised $30 to $75 a week, the work to be done at home. She learned that the money was to be made by the sale of a certain polishing stuff, and she was to advertise for agents, to whom she would furnish the goods. She actually expended $30 for the first installment of stock and outfit, and some more money in advertising for agents One woman came, engaged herself as agent, took away a quantity of the stuff and never came back. The rest the Troy lady has on her hands, change was a decline of 4c in sugars.
